

POLITICAL PARADE

By CLEM WHITAKER

The first World War, according to report, sprouted "war millionaires" in the United States by the baker's dozen, but if any ambitious or avaricious citizen is able to put away a million during the current emergency—after having it out with the income tax man—he will go down in history as a financial Houdini, no less!

Under the new income tax set up, with an additional 10 per cent surtax tacked on for national defense, any ingenious California resident who managed to make a million during 1940 must shortly pungle up $859,952 to Uncle Sam and his state government. Out of his original million, he will have a net of exactly $140,048 to pay alimony, buy a second-hand yacht and make a start on his second million.

On two million, the government's "take" jumps to $1,802,952, leaving the financial wizard with only $197,048 to get started on the New Year. And on five million, the tax is precisely $4,658,952. At this point, the economic royalist, according to actuarial experts, is expected to jump out the window of his penthouse—and leave the balance of his estate to be picked over by the inheritance tax collectors.

Having thus disposed of any potential "war millionaires," it is time to consider what the new defense tax-piled on top of regular income taxes, means to Mr. Average Citizen. First off, exemptions have been lowered. A married couple will be allowed to deduct only $2,000 instead of $2,500, and a single person's exemption has been lowered from $1,000 to $800.

Then surtaxes, starting at the $5,000 income level, have been increased as much as 13 per cent. But the chap below that level down to the $4,000 income starting base, hasn't been overlooked either. On top of the normal 4 per cent tax which he paid the federal income tax man last year, there's now a supertax, for demense, amounting to about 10 per cent of the combined surtax and normal tax. As a minor concession, however, this was limited to 10 per cent of the net income remaining after deduction of the normal tax and original surtax. If you're still able to figure, it's now time to add on your state income tax, which starts at 1 per cent and mounts to 15 per cent, dependent on your affluence.

To reduce the whole business to simple, understandable arithmetic, if you earned $3,000 net last year, your income taxes will total about $216. If you earned $5,000, your bill will be $314. If $6,000, about $422. If $8,000, roughly $682. If $10,000, about $986. If you earned more than that, there's no use explaining it anyway. You'll need a firm of accountants!

Men's Club Enjoys Oyster Supper

The Men's club to the number of 35 enjoyed an oyster supper Monday evening in the Congregational church parlors. George E. Jeffers chief chef for the occasion served them both fried and stewed oysters and they seemed to meet with almost universal favor.

Later Harry Mitchell talked on the water conservation of the district and the project of a dam in the Los Gatos canyon for which many taxpayers on this side of the valley are greatly interested, as they consider that they are not receiving adequate storage in proportion to taxes paid by this area.

Cannibal Land Film to be Shown Monday Evening

A thrilling all color feature length motion picture of the South Seas will be presented at the Campbell Grammar school auditorium next Monday evening at 7:45 p. m.

The picture will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Knapp, who have lived and traveled extensively in the South Seas. It will be sponsored by Sigma Sigma group of the Congregational church for the benefit of the new organ fund.

The picture, "FIJI, Cannibal Land of Yesterday" is highly educational as well as beautiful, as it is an authentic portrayal of the curious customs and picturesque beauty of a land that has emerged from the wildest savagery.

Supplementing this fascinating travel feature is Mr. Knapp's vivid and forceful explanation of the subject as it unfolds on the screen as well as a humorous account of his own and his wife's adventures in Fiji.

A carefully selected musical background adds unmeasurably to the film's entertainment value. There will be a nominal charge with special rates for students.

Kiwanians Hear Rev. W. E. Kirby On Conscription

Kiwanians enjoyed an interesting talk Tuesday when Rev. William E. Kirby of San Jose talked on the subject of "Conscription."

He was not in favor of conscription of young men only but young men and industry alike, including cooks, nurses, skilled labor, etc., as the needs arise.

By state law all citizens are subject to conscription by any constituted authority as judge, constable, or sheriff, in case of emergency.

He mentioned "realistic pacifists" as those who do not believe in offensive warfare, and "extreme pacifists" who say that war is kinning and killing is sinful.

The speaker was presented by Ira Grim.

Next week B. A. Rudolph of the University of California Deciduous Fruit station on Winchester road will speak on "Panama" which he visited rather recently, and H. M. Shadle will be program chairman.

Harry G. Evans Succeeds Father

The county board of supervisors Monday formally appointed Harry G. Evans, 21, to fill out the term of his father, Harry D. Evans, as constable of Campbell township.

Young Evans, who has been substituting for Evans senior since the latter rejoined the navy, attended local schools and has himself served three years in the navy.

The Footlighters Initiate Five Tuesday Night

In amusing and interesting ceremonies The Footlighters initiated five members into the organization Tuesday evening. The new members, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Levenberg, Warren Turner and Allan Homn, and Mrs. J. C. Agostinho, who was voted in some time ago, did stunts, recited and pantomimed their way into the club and were given a rousing welcome by the group. D. H. Cramer, Ira Grim and Ellen Lanphear, membership committee, had charge of the initiation.

The finale of the ceremony was a hospital operating room pantomime with Mervyn Nicholls as the patient; Ira Grim as Dr. Killen; Herold Morton, assistant; Elfrieda Anderson and Theodora Herold, nurses. The operation proved successful and the patient recovered.

President Archie Keesling presided over the short business session which preceded the initiation and named several committees on refreshments and entertainment. A panel discussion was held on plays for the group.

Community singing led by Mrs. Ira Grim and D. H. Cramer was enjoyed by the group. Refreshments served by a committee composed of Marion Nelson, Alma Leverton and Merle Knappen concluded the festivities. The next meeting will be held on the evening of Feb. 11.

He was married in San Francisco, Sept. 5, 1922 to Mrs. Louise Kelm of Miles City, Montana who survives him.

Mr. Duff possessed the virtues of hospitality, generosity and loyalty to loved ones and friends and was a most devoted husband.

S. Duff of Santa Rosa.

Pall bearers were William Truax, Dean Hunter, Henry Phillips, Seba Weeks, John Ellis, and Jim Mathena.

His numerous friends regret his passing and extend sympathy to the sorrowing family.

Subject for the day was "North American Indians." Mrs. Pardee told many interesting things about the Piute Indians of Nevada, among whom she lived as a child. Mrs. Purmort went into the classification of Indians of North America and some about their various forms of work and art.

The meeting ended with a social hour and light refreshments.

The next meeting will be held, Jan. 29 at the home of Mrs. Rose Hanger.

Miss Alice Escaffre of San Jose was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Simonds. Miss Escaffre is a former college chum of Mrs. Simonds.

Plans Are Started For Old Settlers' Day by Chamber

Campbell, Jan. 14—A representative turnout greeted President Dr. W. R. Morgan here last night as he brought the chamber of commerce to order for its first general meeting of the new year.

Communications were read, bills allowed, and other routine matters were brought to the attention of the group. It was revealed that a previous election resulted in the selection of Joseph Agostinho as vice president.

Amendments to the by-laws, previously prepared by a special committee, were read and, after some discussion adopted without change. Major items were the reduction of annual dues for business houses from five dollars to one dollar, and the provision that each director of the chamber make himself responsible for one branch of work in the organization. Directors volunteered as standing committee chairmen, Lowell Benson, membership; Herbert Shadle, public improvement; Axel Granstrom, finance and projects; Joseph Agostinho, public relations and miscellaneous problems. Joseph Gomes, fifth director, will act in an advisory capacity to all committees.

President Morgan appointed R. H. Knappen publicity and advertising director for the year.

Reports from organizations in charge of the various programs for Old Settlers' day, Feb. 22, indicate all groups willing to cooperate. Mervyn Keesling is chairman of the Grange committee responsible for the morning program; Ray Mathis, Walter Silberbauer and Jack Murdock, for the Odd Fellows, afternoon, and Ethan Lanphear represents the Campbell Volunteer Fire department, which plans a black-face minstrel show and dance for evening entertainment. Mark Purmort is general chairman of the day.

An informal discussion of the advisability of business houses remaining open part or all of Feb. 22 points toward business as usual, most merchants believing a Saturday closing would work a hardship on their customers.

The next meeting is slated for Monday, Feb. 10.

Local Merchant Appointed To Planning Com.

At Monday's meeting of the county board of supervisors J. O. Leverton, Campbell hardware dealer, was unanimously appointed to a post on the Santa Clara County Planning commission. This is the first time Campbell has been represented on the commission. Leverton replaces Dr. Roscoe Whiffen, who resigned because of poor health.

Visiting the LBen Howards last Thursday was Mrs. Edgerton Lakin of Palo Alto.

HE ADVERTISED AT HOME

To the well recognized truth that it pays to advertise, should be added the important corollary, "It pays to advertise at home!"

Your own community's newspaper can frequently bring home the bacon even where all others have failed.

Here, for example, is the case of the head of a plastic aircraft production plant at Van Nuys, Calif., who needed 30 skilled engineers in his factory.

He advertised his wants in national journals. He even hung a big banner across the front of his plant. But it was not until his needs were made known in Van Nuys papers one day last week that things really began to happen. Early the next morning a line of applicants stood outside the factory door. By noontime, 30 qualified engineers had been selected, placed on the payroll, and the problem solved.

Wherefore, with good evidence at hand, we say, "It pays to advertise at home, in your own newspaper." Certainly there is no need to remind readers that whatever their wants, whatever the bargains they have to offer, advertising is an indispensable aid. Let them recall Arthur Brisbane's common sense adage, "Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark." And let them advertise—at home—for results!

A PEOPLE UNITED

The world listened when President Roosevelt spoke to the congress on the state of the Union. The world didn't listen primarily because of the statements of American policy he made, though those were interesting enough: 1. All inclusive national defense. 2. Unstinted aid to "those resolute peoples everywhere, who are resisting aggression." 3. America will never "acquiesce in a peace dictated by aggressors and sponsored by appeasers." They listened because Franklin Roosevelt spoke not as an individual leader but as the voice of the world's mightiest potential industrial and military force.

Making that clear, the President declared: "In the recent national election there was no substantial difference between the two great parties in respect to that national policy . . . Our strength is in our unity of purpose."

When Hitler speaks, or Mussolini, the voice is that of the dictator; the people are mute. When Roosevelt defied dictatorship and oppression he spoke the will of Republican and Democrat, of Protestant, Jew and Catholic, of rich man and poor man. The world listened attentively—whether approvingly or hatefully—to the expression of the opinion of a people united, the greatest and strongest people evolution has produced.

CALIFORNIA GETS RELIEF

The only declining payroll that could bring Californians cheer has appropriately enough, been doing just that. During the last six months of 1940, relief costs dropped down 41 percent compared with that period in 1939. More jobs for relievers are bringing real relief to California!

GETTING THE BOOT

After having pushed the would-be invading Italian army steadily backward, the Greeks are now proceeding to add insult to injury.

An American correspondent with the Greek armies in northern Albania reports that there is a lack of an adequate supply of bombs for the small Greek air force. Crews of some of the smaller bomber-observation planes have made the best of their dilemma. In their "bombing" attacks they have sent crashing onto Italian soldiers' heads, tin cans and old boots filled with rocks and other heavy objects.

This, it would appear, is one of the worst blows yet sustained by the Duce—a blow on a par with the loss of Bardia. When the enemy reaches a point where it starts throwing old shoes and battered tincans at you—in order to save its ammunition—it has given you about the first and last word in insults. It is imperative in a properly run war that the enemy show you the courtesy of at least taking you seriously. When he begins hurling the remnants of a rummage sale at your head, it's safe to conclude you have failed to win his respect.

ROOKIES IN THE SKY

Although progress in strengthening America's air arm has been beset by bottlenecks and other handicaps, it is heartening to report that in at least one field of aviation the nation has really been giving wings to its hopes.

The Civil Aeronautics board—formerly the Civil Aeronautics authority—is the bearer of these good tidings. The record of its civilian pilot training program speaks for itself. It is a record of conspicuous success in building up a valuable reserve force of trained civilian pilots.

In 1939, some of the 14,000 pilots received their training under this program. Today, with more than 700 college and 200 non-college institutions cooperating with the Civil Aeronautics board, the end of the present school year will find the country in possession of more than 100,000 civilian pilots. Yet two years ago, the United States could claim a grand total of only 21,000 such fliers.

The swiftness of this advance indicates a welcome absence of bottlenecks in creating for the nation a reserve force of trained civilian airmen. It is a necessary task being carried out with the necessary speed.

LABOR'S RESPONSIBILITY

Evidence grows that American labor generally is prepared to accept its share of duty and sacrifice in the gigantic task of rearming the United States and aiding Britain. There are unpleasant recent memories, such as the Vultee strike in the vital aircraft industry. More indicative, however, of the real spirit of responsible labor groups is the pledge of "no strikes" in defense industries offered by the powerful Metal Trades Division of the American Federation of Labor. Any and all disputes will be arbitrated without stoppage of production, by mutual agreement of companies and unions. As England has learned, the defense crisis calls for sacrifices—not abandonment of basic rights, but sacrifices—on the part of the whole people. The most urgent problem before America today is the job of putting the defense program across. If that should fail, nothing else might matter.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

Chester C. Davis of the National Defense Advisory Council recently called a conference in Washington, D. C., attended by the heads of government departments and the representatives of national farm organizations, to discuss the problems which confront agriculture as a result of the present national and international situation.

And from Ezra T. Benson, executive secretary of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, we have a report of the conference which graphically depicts the sharp difference between the conditions which confronted agriculture back in 1917 and 1918, as opposed to conditions today.

Reports Mr. Benson:

"Agriculture's responsibility in the present crisis is the same as that of other American interests—namely, to make available the maximum of man-power and resources for defense purposes.

"In contrast with the conditions at the beginning of World War No. 1, however, agriculture already has, and is in a position to produce, an abundance of food and fibre products. At the same time it is faced with making far-reaching adjustments, due to a loss of export markets and the resultant decrease in farm prices on many commodities.

"It was emphasized in the conference that no defense program will be fully successful if farm prices and farm income are not maintained at a level that will keep the farm plant in a healthy condition. It was also emphasized that the decentralization of industry in connection with the defense program may cause farm wages to rise in certain sections of the country, and also throw an increased burden of taxation on agriculture in these areas. And it was likewise agreed that there would probably be a tendency toward an increased self-sufficiency in farm operations on the part of many farmers, due to the loss of export markets and resultant low prices for particular commodities."

Fear was expressed during the conference, according to national cooperative secretary that there is also developing a tendency for the government to handle an increasing percentage of farm products, now that export markets have been greatly reduced, and that in the future farmers may find themselves faced with selling much of their output to large government buyers.

And then Mr. Benson made this significant comment:

"While the government is committed to a policy of maintaining farm purchasing power, it was brought out that with the possible exception of livestock and wool, most farm commodity prices are far below what they should be on the basis of the declared national policy. It was emphasized that we are faced with the problem of lifting prices of most farm commodities while holding other non-agricultural prices under control.

"The threat of the upward

spiralling of non-agricultural prices, with the attendant increases of wages and other farm costs, presents a most serious threat to agriculture at the present time. It was pointed out that an attempt is being made to keep prices of industrial products in hand by increasing supplies of such products through importation and domestic purchase of stocks of strategic materials. Finally, it was pointed out that the price structure of agriculture is at the point of dividing, with the prices of domestically consumed products going upward and prices of erstwhile exported products tending to rest on government loans as a basis for prices."

Stress was laid at the Washington conference on the undoubted fact that most farmers have thus far failed to realize the tremendous effect of the impact of the war upon farming and farm prices and the various national farm organizations agreed to cooperate with the government in getting the facts to their members in the country. In light of the serious farm problems which grew out of World War No. 1, it is generally agreed by both government economists and farm representatives that every possible precaution must be taken also to avoid a new debacle of glutted markets, shattered prices and economic confusion after the current defense program is completed.

The farmer, during the months and years just ahead needs to get the full story on what war abroad and the defense program at home are doing to his business. If he is to come through the crisis safely—and help his country in coming through, too—he needs an understanding of his nation's problems as well as his farm problems. The destiny of America—and the destiny of American agriculture—are basically dependent each on the other.

He attended local schools, and was a graduate of Campbell high, where he was an active and popular member of the student body. He was also an accomplished musician. Several years after graduation he joined the United States navy, in which organization he had served for the past six years, the last three of which saw him a torpedoman in submarine service, stationed in the Orient.

A Winter Treat — Baked Spiced Oranges

BY BETTY BARCLAY

What winter fruits lack in variety they more than make up for in universal appeal and availability. Everyone likes oranges and apples; everyone can have them as Nature is generous with these fruits which are packed with health as well as flavor.

There's no better way to serve apples or oranges than just as they come from the tree—or in juice form for oranges, but there are many ways of cooking them which will be different and delight the family. For instance, these large California Navel oranges which ripen just in time for the holidays and can be had all winter are grand when seasoned a bit and baked to serve hot with meat—especially with goose, duck, pork or ham.

Many variations in cooked oranges to accompany the meat course have been originated by Californians—perhaps because California Navels, seedless and firmer-meated than most varieties, usually grow to a larger size than other oranges and are therefore easier to work with.

For the Baked Spiced Oranges pictured, choose large or medium-sized fruit, one orange for every two persons. Cut oranges in halves. Loosen segments in each half with a sharp knife or scissors. Top each half with:

1 teaspoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon butter
Sprinkle of nutmeg and cinnamon

Bake in moderate oven (350°) for about 45 minutes or until well heated, and butter, sugar and spices have penetrated into the fruit. Serve as a meat accompaniment. Each orange half may be decorated with a cherry or a glazed cranberry. It is important that the oranges be hot when served.

If you don't have time to prepare these spiced oranges, why not try some broiled orange slices? Choose clean, unblemished fruit. Cut the whole, unpeeled fruit into slices ¼ inch thick. Marinate 30 minutes or more in Lemon French dressing, using ½ cup lemon juice, ½ cup salad oil and seasoning. Place about 3 inches under the flame and broil for 5 to 10 minutes until edges of orange slices are slightly browned. Serve hot.

Another recipe which is delicious is for baked oranges to be served hot with meat or cold in a salad or dessert.

4 Navel oranges
2 cups water
2 cups sugar
½ cup white corn syrup

Boil whole, unpeeled oranges for about 30 minutes or until tender. Cool. Cut into halves, quarters or ½ inch slices. Mix corn syrup, sugar and water together and cook 5 minutes. Pour this syrup over the cooked oranges which have been placed in baking dish. Cover closely and bake at moderate temperature (350°) for 1½ hours. If orange pieces are not completely covered by syrup, baste frequently. Remaining syrup may be served with oranges as a sauce.

For variation syrup may be colored red, may be flavored with spice or with maple syrup. The orange may be stuck with whole cloves before baking.

To keep for future use, seal while hot in sterilized jars. For a salad, arrange pieces of baked orange around a mound of cottage or cream cheese on bed of lettuce; accompany with any desired dressing.

For a dessert, brown a marshmallow on each quarter or slice or sprinkle with coconut.
